§ 2. The Writing of Sermons, ... 572

Different Methods of Writing, ... 572

1. The elaborate writing of the whole sermon. A. Good results of the method. It disciplines the preacher's intellect; his heart; induces the preacher and the hearers to obtain large and accurate views of truth; tends to promote the literary as well as the religious growth of the people; gives authority to the preacher; variety to his ministrations; prepares him for exigencies; qualifies him to preach extempore; tends to perpetuate his influence. B. Evil results of the method. There is danger that it will repress the life and energy of sermons; will debilitate the minister; encourage his ambition; induce him to spend in writing sermons the time which he may spend more usefully in writing for the press; induce him to neglect his extemporaneous sermons; to write in a style which will fail to make a good impression on the people.

2. The elaborate writing of parts of the sermon.

3. Easy writing. Remarks on it.
